

Defending Mobility & Homeownership

The 8th Annual Preserving the American Dream Conference

Orlando, Florida, September 23-25, 2010

The American dream of mobility and homeownership are under attack. Secretary of Transportation Ray LaHood has vowed to “coerce people out of their cars,” in part by requiring all metropolitan areas to increase population densities and traffic congestion.

Now more than ever, it is time to come together to fight such threats to the American Dream. The 2010 Preserving the American Dream conference in Orlando on September 23–25 is your opportunity to meet dozens of experts and compare notes with activists from all over the world.

This conference brings together elected officials, academic experts, and activists to discuss urban growth, transportation, and economic recovery issues. If freedom, prosperity, mobility, and affordable homeownership are important to you, then you need to attend this conference.

Central Florida Tour

The 2010 conference features an optional tour of Orlando-Tampa transportation and land-use projects. We will visit Celebration, the New Urban town developed by Disney.

Then we will travel the route of Florida's proposed high-speed rail line from Orlando to Tampa, where we will visit to the Tampa-Hillsborough County Expressway Authority and take a close look at the elevated expressway that the authority built in the median strip of an existing highway.
